How to eat a "Weißwurst"

OPTION 1

CUT TO PIECES

Cut lengthwise into the "Weißwurst", open the two halves of the sausage with knife and fork and then scrape out the sausage with your fork. Savour each bite with sweet mustard, a pretzel and a freshly tapped, cool Paulaner beer.

OPTION 2

"ZUZELN"

"Sucking" - The traditional Bavarian way to eat a "Weißwurst". How does it work?

That's how you do it!

STEP 1: "hand to mouth" Pick up the sausage with your fingers. Dip it into the sweet mustard and raise the sausage to your mouth.

STEP 2: "sucking" Bite a hole into the skin of the sausage. Suck ("zuzeln") the filling out of the skin. Preferably remove the filling with your teeth from the skin. The traditional Bavarian way to enjoy the sausage is also with a "Brezn" and a fresh Paulaner beer.

Champagne brands are primarily judged by the quality of their "bruts" without a vintage, because the art of assembling is best expressed in the production of these champagnes. The Veuve Clicquot champagne masters understands this art masterfully. Our Brut Yellow Label testifies to the character of the unique vineyards and the continuity of the Veuve Clicquot style. Veuve Clicquot Yellow Label combines two apparent opposites - strength and finesse - and keeps them in perfect balance. The traditional assemblage of the Yellow Label comes from 50 to 60 different crus and is traditionally composed as follows: 50 to 55% Pinot Noir, 15 to 20% Pinot Meunier and 28 to 33% Chardonnay. On the nose, the golden-yellow champagne first shows fruity nuances of white fruits and raisins, which then turn into vanilla and finally yeast tones. The brisk and dynamic attack in the mouth so typical of the Yellow Label then gives way to a symphony of fruity notes. This champagne undoubtedly belongs to the category of well-structured bruts with an admirable wine character. It also impresses with its remarkable finish, in which fruity and spicy components alternate.

Nikka from the Barrel Whiskey is produced by Japan's second largest distillery. In the meantime, Japan has built up a remarkable malt whiskey production that can match the quality of the Scots. The Nikka from the Barrel Whiskey is distilled in Coffrey still, i.e. in contrast to the production of malt whiskey in the classic copper stills (pot still), grain whiskey is produced using the continuous burning process. The whiskey rests in bourbon barrels and barrels in which sherry ripened and is then combined with other whiskeys. The whiskey from the land of smiles smiles at us in amber color, flows oily into the glass, and just looking at it is a real pleasure. On the nose very fruity, caramel and full of vanilla, like a bourbon - very intense. Tasty sweet and fruity, notes of oak and spicy notes complete the aroma.

The Talisker 10 year single malt is the bedrock of the Talisker family and has been produced by the sea in the oldest distillery in the Scottish Isle of Skye since 1830. Its smell of sea salt and smoky, peaty taste take you straight to its maritime homeland - one of the roughest, most remote, but also the most beautiful landscapes in Scotland. The first of the two distillation phases gives the single malt its uniquely spicy complexity and the unmistakable pepper notes. The whiskey reaches its fullmigen, maritime flair, which is refined by a long-lasting, warm glowing finish.

Munich lifestyle

The "Mass" of beer gleams golden in the sun. Heavenly scent from the grilled chicken and roasted pork knuckles clear its way through the air. At the next table in the shade of the chestnut trees, a man unpacks his "Brotzeit", a typical Bavarian snack consisting of bread and "Brezn", accompanied by something appropriate like cheese or sausage. This is real Bavarian beer garden idylle found in one of Munich's "Wirtshäuser" and perfect summer happiness
